FOUR CENTS

AMERICANS TO MOVE INTO JAPAN SUNDAY

Meandering Along the Main Stem By WASH FAYETTE

Some of these days when priorities are lifted the city is going to have some new refuse collectors, and there will be enough of them to go around the up-town district, instead of a few scattered ones that have just about ceased to be useful.

The present refuse collectors were purchased years ago, and some of them have lost their legs, been dented and buffeted about until they are anything else but slightly.

The city has gotten by with the old containers during the war, but when material is obtainable and more attractive refuse collectors are available, then the old ones will be discarded and new ones purchased.

With an increased number of the refuse collectors, a great deal of litter will be kept off the streets, particularly if a few fines are assessed for littering the streets.

Scattered throughout Fayette County and elsewhere are many copies of the various histories of the county that have been compiled over a long period of years.

Probably the history with the largest number in existence is the last one published, in 1914, by the B. F. Bowen Co. of Indianapolis, of which Frank M. Allen is listed as the editor.

Prior to that Chapman Bros. of Chicago, in 1892, published a Portrait and Biographical Record of Fayette, Pickaway and Madison Counties.

There are still some of R. S. Dill's History of Fayette County, published by Odell & Mayer, Dayton, in 1881, and it is one of the most complete of them all.

First of the real histories, and one which is treasured by many of the old timers and others, is the Illustrated Historical Atlas of Fayette County issued by L. H. Everts, Philadelphia, in 1875, or 70 years ago.

This atlas has numerous maps, a great many drawings reproduced by woodcuts, and also contains much historical lore that is news to the average Fayette Countian.

One of the histories (there are probably few of them in the county) was Rufus Putnam's Pioneer Record and Reminiscences of the early settlers and settlement of Fayette County, published in Cincinnati by Applegate, Pounsford, & Co., in 1872.

Howe's History of Ohio contained much information about Fayette County.

Within the next few years I expect some one interested in compiling county histories, will issue a new one of this county, bringing the history of the county up to date, and I know a great many people will welcome that, because much history has been written in the community since that last history was issued in 1914.

LANA AND BETTY ILL WITH NERVOUS COLLAPSE

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 21.—(AP)—Two film favorites, Lana Turner and Betty Hutton, are on the sick list.

Lana collapsed on a movie set yesterday and taken to a hospital where physicians said her condition was not serious but she would be required to rest for a week because of nervous exhaustion.

Betty wired from Paris that she has been forced to cancel the rest of her USO Camp entertainment tour because of a nervous collapse, and will sail for home Thursday.

HE'LL PAINT THE TOWN TO IMPROVE ITS LOOKS

CAMBRIDGE, Aug. 21.—(AP)—Mahlon N. Haines, shoe manufacturer of York, Pa., didn't like the looks of things in his home town, nearby Old Washington (population 1,400).

So he deposited $500 with a local paint dealer to paint all the town's houses.

Wartime Controls On Industry Eased

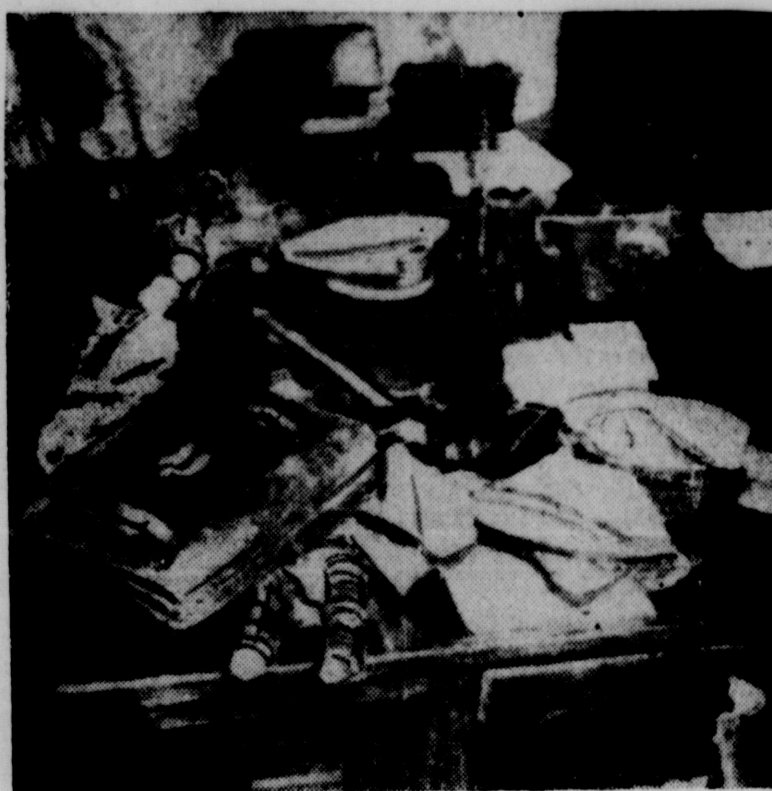

Oh, How The Mighty Have Fallen In Defeat!

HOW THE ONCE MIGHTY and belligerent Germans and Jap would-be conquerors have fallen! And, how humiliating it all must be!

In the chair where Hitler used to sit an American (photo at left) nonchalantly rests and hangs his feet on the table where the fallen Nazi warlords plotted world conquest. This Yank happened on the ruins of the Chancellery while touring Berlin and couldn't resist a typically American reaction.

Gold braid of Jap defeat is shown in photo at right. Wouldn't there be red faces if the God-emperor saw that pile of Samauri swords, prosaic briefcases and gold braid hats on a desk in the ante-room of Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters at Manila as members of the 16-man Jap surrender arrangement delegation present their credentials to Lt. Gen. Richard Sutherland, chief of staff to the Allied supreme commander. This is an official U. S. Army Signal Corps radiophoto.

Green Light Is Given for Manufacture of More Than 100 Previously Restricted Civilian Things from Radios to Trucks—Curbs Also Released on Wages And Salaries

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—(AP)—American industry today poured through the door—opened by the government—into the promised land of full production for peace.

The government last night tossed off 210 wartime controls on industry. Some 125 remain. Most of them, too, soon will be lopped off.

The action gives an official—and full—go-ahead on manufacture of things like radios, refrigerators, trucks.

This doesn't mean there'll be enough of them for everyone in a short while. That takes time.

Meanwhile:

1. Economic Stabilizer William H. Davis says pay increases, under the government's new program, won't cause price increases.

A Senate committee came back today, ahead of time, to resume hearings on the so-called "full employment" bill. President Truman wants it passed.

3. The full Congress itself may not come back September 5, as planned, but a week or so later.

Here's the story on production: Last week the War Production Board announced a plan to send American industry spinning back into full production fast; by lifting wartime controls.

The 210 lifted last night put the plan into official action. All but perhaps 40 of the remaining 125 restrictions will disappear promptly.

The 40 will be kept to prevent big manufacturers from hoarding needed materials at the expense of smaller manufacturers. This would jam-up the change-over program.

WPB tossed out, also, controls on making:

Metal furniture, photographic film, storage batteries, electric fans, motorcycles, shipping containers, caskets, construction machinery, machine tools, oil burning equipment, electric ranges, paper cups.

WPB still has a limit on the number of automobiles which can be produced this year, but WPB Chairman J. A. Krug said this, too, will go out shortly.

Krug said the question of whether new cars will be delivered with spare tires still is being discussed.

He said:

Producers of consumer durable goods—like stoves, refrigerators—

FAIRGROUNDS FATE DECISION NEARING

Either Sale or Settlement Is Indicated

COLUMBUS, Aug. 21.—(AP)—A disposition to sell the State Fair Grounds to the federal government or accept a cash settlement for alterations made by the Army Air Forces in its three years of occupancy was evidenced today at a conference of state department executives.

The ultimate recommendation to Gov. Frank J. Lausche, however, will be made by the State Board of Agriculture, which meets August 27.

The department executives conferred with Governor Lausche, who had gone to Cleveland to attend the funeral of an uncle, Antonio Milavec.

They reached no decisions, said Commerce Director James W. Huffman, but will report the tenor of the discussions to the governor.

When the Army leased the Fair Grounds in May, 1942, it agreed to return the property in its original condition within 18 months after the end of the war.

Potential Difficulties Still Smoulder in China and Parts of Manchuria

Allied occupation of Japan will begin Sunday, the Japanese government and imperial headquarters said today in a joint communique which included an appeal to the Japanese people to "remain calm and continue their business as usual."

The communique, broadcast by the Japanese Domei news agency, amplified an earlier announcement by the Information Ministry

HEEDLESS JAP WARNING

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 21

—(AP)—The Japanese government on the eve of Allied occupation of its homeland, issued a non-fraternization order.

that the first occupation troops would be airborne, landing at Atsugi airfield, 2 miles southwest of Tokyo.

The airborne landings will be followed Tuesday, August 28, with "further landings from warships and transports in the Yokosuka area," the ministry said. Yokosuka is one of Japan's great naval bases. It is located at the mouth of Tokyo Bay.

Japs Hate To Give Up

Domei quoted the ministry as saying that Japanese army and navy forces would be "transferred immediately" from the landing area to prevent any outbreaks.

Sufficient police will be stationed in the occupation areas to "maintain peace and order."

The Japanese announcements were the first disclosures of plans for the triumphal entry by Allied forces which will lead to the formal surrender to General MacArthur as supreme Allied commander.

MacArthur had announced only that the occupation would be carried out by the end of the month.

First details of the occupation were disclosed as the Asiatic continent still simmered with trouble.

Tokyo again protested to General MacArthur the landings of paratroop relief parties near prison camps. Those who landed at Mukden were interned. Knife-wielding Nipponese "werewolves" were reported operating elsewhere in Manchuria. Rival Chi-

SEARCH FOR SLAYER OF GIRL GROWING

23 Year Old Waitress Was Philadelphia

HADDON HEIGHTS, N. J., Aug. 21.—(AP)—A search was launched today for the sadistic slayer of a pretty 23-year-old waitress whose nude and brutally beaten body was discovered in a cistern here.

The girl, identified last night as Margaret McDade of Philadelphia, was assaulted and tossed alive into the cistern where she suffocated among the sewage after a victory celebration last Tuesday, police said.

Early today police said they have a "definite suspect" and Lawrence Doran, chief of county detectives, indicated an arrest could be expected soon.

Identification was made by the girl's sister, Mrs. Katherine Halpin.

TWO STATE GOVERNORS

TO PLAY GOLF MATCH

NEW MARTINSVILLE W. Va. Aug. 21.—(AP)—A golf match between the governors of West Virginia and Ohio has been arranged as part of the ceremonies preceding New Martinsville's "Victory" Regatta on the Ohio River October 7, sponsors reported.

Governor Clarence W. Meadows of West Virginia, a competitor in numerous amateur tournaments, will meet Governor Frank Lausche of the neighboring state at the Sistersville Club course that morning.

'Full Employment' Legislation Is Given Presidential Backing

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—(AP)—Backers of legislation designed to underwrite jobs for all Americans except school children and full-time housewives claimed strong presidential support today as hearings opened before a Senate banking subcommittee.

The legislation, labeled the "Full Employment Act," originally was introduced by four Democrats, Murray of Montana, Thomas of Utah, Wagner of New York and O'Mahoney of Wyoming. Four Republicans later joined them as co-sponsors—Morse of Oregon, Tobey of New Hampshire, Aiken of Vermont and Langer of North Dakota.

Marked "must" by the White House, the bill sets out the policy that "all Americans able to work and seeking work have the right to useful, remunerative, regular and full-time employment." It declares that when there are not enough jobs to go around, it is the federal government's responsibility to spend enough money to provide them.

Public Work Program
The measure makes specific references to public works programs. Sponsors stress the desirability of proper federal investments, while disclaiming any idea for made-work or leaf raking projects.

Wagner and Murray discussed the measure with President Truman yesterday, reporting later that "he is strong for it," and "he wants us to proceed with all due speed."

Jobs For War Veterans
Raise Special Problems
WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—(AP)—Gen. Omar N. Bradley, veterans administrator, said today that many veterans will not be content to return to their prewar jobs.

They will prefer, he said, to apply what they learned in the service to qualify for better positions—but whether the so-called full employment bill would be the answer to the problem he declined to say.

The new veterans head declined also to commit himself on whether the measure would be desirable from an economic or political point of view or whether he considered it in accord with President Truman's financial program.

Declaring his administration would do all it could to help the returning veteran, especially in education, Bradley testified that any condition assuring more or less continuous work would have decided effects on veterans and the Veterans Administration.

In those circumstances, he said, fewer would apply for unemployment, educational and vocational training benefits under the GI Bill of Rights. He said experience showed that many veterans with partial disability would not claim

STRESSLESS BILLION MAY GO TO UNRAA SOON

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—(AP)—The United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration may receive another $1,000,000,000 from this country to head off famine and suffering in foreign lands.

Chairman Bloom (D-NY) of the House foreign affairs committee says he favors turning over the money with no strings on its use. He will call his group for hearings on the proposal in three or four weeks.

BUS TRAVEL CURB LIFT
ASKED BY AKRONIAN

AKRON, Aug. 21.—(AP)—Robert M. Sanderson, president of city council, has telegraphed the ODT in Washington asking relaxation of bus transportation restrictions as soon as President Truman declares the Pacific War officially ended. Sanderson said legislation instructing local buses to return to pre-war schedules would be introduced in council today.

UNEMPLOYMENT CONFAB
WILL BE HELD SOON

COLUMBUS, Aug. 21.—(AP)—Miss Hannah Protzman of Cleveland, executive secretary, announced today that a statewide meeting of the Ohio Welfare Conference to discuss unemployment and relief problems created by the end of the war probably would be held here Nov. 25-28.

NEW HOLLAND BOY RETURNS FROM PACIFIC

He Wears Five Battle Stars And Seven Overseas Sleeve Stripes

Cpl. Charles G. Bryant of New Holland, is enroute home under the Army's redeployment program after serving overseas for more than 41 months with the 209th Army anti-aircraft automatic weapons battalion, a unit of General Walter Krueger's Sixth Army forces on Luzon in the Philippines.

Knocking down enemy aircraft was the primary function of Cpl. Bryant's battalion, but in the Luzon campaign the gunners really came into their own. Using quadruple .50 calibre machine guns and 40 mm guns mounted on half-track vehicles, the "triple threat" artillerymen moved simultaneously with the leading infantry elements, their fire combining the hillside and bamboo thickets, effectively pinning down the enemy and neutralizing positions.

Cpl. Bryant sailed with his unit, from Boston, Mass., on February 18, 1942, traveling to Rio De Janeiro and from there to Africa, and through the Indian Ocean to Sydney, Australia. Their guns were first set up at Brisbane in defense of that city, from the Japanese planes. The 209th then moved to New Guinea and fought all the way up the coast. For their achievements in that operation they received the presidential citation.

Cpl. Bryant has five battle stars on his Asiatic-Pacific ribbon, as well as seven overseas stripes. He also holds the Philippines liberation ribbon for the Luzon campaign.

WARTIME CONTROLS ON INDUSTRY NOW ARE BEING EASED UP

have agreed to turn out the same proportion of low-cost goods as they did before the war.

If they don't, Krug said, WPB is ready to crack down with controls.

William H. Davis, the economic stabilizer, said:

"I am not worried that any raises under this program (to let bosses boost wages and salaries without government okay if it doesn't mean a price increase) will be inflationary.

"I am confident they won't break down our price controls," Davis reasoned:

1. Bosses who give raises will do it voluntarily, understanding they can't raise prices.

2. Even in normal times pay increases don't necessarily mean higher prices.

3. Although some wages are increased, the nation's total payroll will decline because of elimination of wartime overtime, loss of jobs, and other factors.

The Senate committee considering the "full employment" bill held hearings on it for only two days. This was right after Congress went on vacation August 1. It planned to resume the hearings when Congress returned in October. The end of the war—and the unemployment problem staring the country in the face—has hastened the committee's return.

This bill is no guarantee of full employment. It simply would authorize, if it became law, the government to survey employment prospects yearly, make recommendations, and spend Federal money to provide jobs if necessary.

When the war ended, congressional leaders talked of bringing Congress back September 5. How they are reported to be thinking of delaying the return a week beyond that. The reason:

There isn't enough reconversion legislation ready to lay in the lap of congressmen if they came back September 5.

Other developments:

The Navy said its civilian employees, outside Washington, will be working a 5-day, 40-hour week by September 15.

The government still wants people to continue saving their cooking fats. An Agriculture Department spokesman said:

"The situation still is very critical and will be for some months."

The War Manpower Commission expects to issue shortly a weekly report showing how badly cut-backs in war contracts have affected employment in the 166 chief labor market areas.

The Maritime Commission still has contracts for 434 merchant ships after cancelling 135. Some of the remainder may be stopped. Ships in advanced construction will be completed.

'FULL EMPLOYMENT' LEGISLATION GIVEN PRESIDENT'S BACKING

Eight days of hearing are scheduled this week and next, with Gen. Omar N. Bradley, new veterans' administrator, as the first witness. Veterans' organizations, cabinet officers, labor union presidents, business representatives and sculptor Jo Davidson also will be heard.

If there were a prospective deficit of jobs, the president would recommend a program to encourage non-federal spending that would enhance employment opportunities. If that were not enough, he would recommend a federal program of "investment and expenditure," including public works which could be carried out through private contractors.

Plans for Congress

Some congressional leaders are considering postponing for a week or two the scheduled September 5 reconvening of Congress.

The movement to hold up recall of the lawmakers from their summer vacation is strongest on the House side. There prospects are that there will be no reconversion legislation ready until later next month.

Notices already have been sent to all senators and representatives informing them unofficially Congress will reconvene the first week in September instead of October 8. But official notices have not been dispatched. They are slated to go out late next week.

Some House leaders believe it would be unwise to reconvene until a reconversion program is ready for consideration.

Committees Called

Chairman Manasco (D-Ala), whose House expenditures committee has jurisdiction over three of the five measures in the so-called "reconversion program," said he doubted if his group could have any legislation ready for several weeks after September 5.

The Alabamian has called his committee to meet next Tuesday to consider changes in the surplus property law.

Following that, the expenditures committee will consider so-called "full employment" proposals—now before a Senate banking subcommittee—and a bill to reorganize the executive branch of the government.

The House ways and means committee will start hearings next week on unemployment compensation legislation, but Chairman Doughton (D-NC) told reporters last week he was doubtful if it could have a bill in shape by September 5.

The House military committee is scheduled to meet next week to consider proposals to terminate the draft law before its normal expiration date, next May 15. However, there is some doubt whether a quorum of the committee would be on hand.

As his committee prepared to take up the surplus property issue next week, Manasco told a reporter he favors President Truman's proposal to give authority over the program to a single administrator instead of the present three-man board.

The committee chairman added he doubts whether more than $15,000,000,000 could be recovered from the estimated $100,000,000,000 in war surpluses slated for disposal.

compensation as long as they were gainfully employed. With work available, he predicted the number of former service men seeking domiciliary care in veterans facilities would decrease.

"I believe that I am safe in saying that the greatest concern of returning veterans is that of obtaining useful employment, either self employment or other, and reestablishing themselves in civilian life," he said.

Backers of the legislation claimed strong presidential support as the hearings opened.

Omar B. Ketchum, legislative representative of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, told the committee the question uppermost in the minds of the servicemen and women "is whether they will return to gainful, satisfactory employment and be able to live normal, useful, American lives, or whether they will face unemployment."

Without full employment, Ketchum said, veterans "are going to be penalized in employment opportunities unless existing employment rules are changed."

He said the "rapid growth and expansion of organized labor in recent years has thrown a wall of contracts and seniority protection around millions of jobs."

He said the VFW advocated legislation granting statutory seniority to veterans equivalent to the length of their military or naval service to be used in obtaining employment.

"If there is to be some unemployment," Ketchum asserted, "the burden should not be borne entirely by the returning veterans who could not accumulate seniority and job protection while in the armed forces."

AMERICANS TO MOVE IN TO OCCUPY JAPAN ON SUNDAY; ALL IS TENSE

Japanese forces were reported clashing. Intermittent fighting broke out along 300 miles of Burma's jungle.

Surrender Envoy Returns

Emperor Hirohito's surrender envoys returned to Tokyo from Manila after two airplane mishaps and took over direction of preparation for General MacArthur's triumphal entry of Nippon.

Presumably it was on instructions brought back by them that Imperial headquarters and the Japanese Board of Information announced that MacArthur's airborne troops would land Sunday at Atsugi, about 20 miles southwest of Tokyo.

They will be followed next Tuesday by seaborne contingents which the Board of Information said would debark at Yokosuka naval base on Tokyo Bay.

Both dates are within the deadline set by General MacArthur, who announced yesterday that he would lead air, ground and sea occupation forces into the defeated country by August 31.

Manila dispatches hinted the Japanese military code may require the surrender delegation, led by Lt. Gen. Takashiro Kawabe, to commit Hara Kiri as soon as their work is done.

Broadcasts by the government-controlled Domei news agency devoted most of their attention to dissatisfaction among hot-head Japanese militarists and political rival.

Trying To Be Scary?

"There is no telling what unfortunate incidents may occur," Domei said, because unconditional surrender was so strong "resented by a considerable portion of the military men," who have not experienced "defeat on the field of battle."

Tokyo told MacArthur it would be necessary to keep armed forces in the homelands to maintain order. Premier Gen. Prince Higashimuni broadcast an appeal that Japanese "maintain strict discipline" during occupation.

Tokyo newspapers called for fresh leadership.

"A new political system must be established in Japan," said the Nippon Times.

Mainichi reminded its readers "our endeavors to build up a Japan based on sheer might met with complete failure."

A potent reminder of that failure was atom-bombed Nagasaki, described in new Japanese reports as "a dead city, all areas being literally razed to the ground."

Fighting Ended

All organized fighting had apparently ended in Manchuria, the newest and greatest land front of the war.

Soviet forces reported only a few areas remained to be occupied, notably above Port Arthur which Japan won from Czarist Russia in the war of 1905. Complete occupation will end 14 years of Tokyo rule in Manchuria.

While the Kwantung army, backbone of Nippon's war machine, was surrendering in droves, Moscow radio reported Japanese "Werewolves" were operating at night, attacking with knives and daggers.

Surrendering envoys from Gen. Yasuji Okamura, Japanese commander in China, arrived at Chih-kiang to arrange details for laying down their arms, with Gen. Ho Yin-Chin, head of Chinese forces.

Clashes between Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalist troops and Communist forces were reported in North China. Chiang denied a Communist appeal for participation in Japanese surrender and again asked Communist leaders to confer with him in Chungking.

Chungking announced four members of Lt. Gen. James Doolittle's first bombers of Tokyo had been released from a prison camp near Peiping.

Fighting continued in Burma despite a demand from Adm. Lord Louis Mountbatten to Field Marshal Count Juichi Terauchi to surrender his forces in southeast Asia. Leaflets telling of the end of the war were rained on the Japs from airplanes, by artillery shells, and sent by canoes and posted on trees in the jungles.

pressing internal political problems without recourse to civil strife.

Reflecting concern over the situation, already reported to have resulted in a series of clashes between National Government and Communist troops in North China, Chiang dispatched an urgent message to Communist Leader Gen. Mao Tze-Tung at Yen-an asking him to reconsider his refusal to come to Chungking for conferences.

Chiang declared he could not accede to the demands of Gen. Chu Teh, Communist army commander, for participation in the Japanese surrender arrangements. Chiang previously had ordered Chu to take no independent action with regard to disarming the Japanese or taking over territory the Japanese now hold.

Chiang said it appeared Chu "is not fully acquainted with the procedure of Japanese surrender."

THE WAR TODAY

—By DEWITT MACKENZIE—

The shadow of that most dreaded of all conflicts—civil war—is striking across China and, if we accept Tokyo reports, Japan also is hearing internal rumblings which grow out of her surrender to the Allies.

Thus we see political dissension tearing at the focal points of the far eastern theatre, just as it did in Europe with the collapse of the Axis. The difference of these two extremes of the eastern hemisphere is that the explosions in the Orient easily may be more violent, although there still are the makings of strife in more than one of Europe's trouble-spots.

Specifically: The dangerous feud between Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek's Chungking government and the great body of northern Chinese communists is reported to have burst into flame in one spot, when regular forces clashed with Chinese communist troops in Shansi province. Meantime from Tokyo came a stream of broadcasts carrying the implication of internal unrest. The Japanese government even informed MacArthur that it would be necessary for the present to keep armed Jap forces both in Japan and on the continent to maintain order.

Those are the facts, but they don't warrant us in jumping to sweeping conclusions. Developments alone will tell the story.

The point which we can stress legitimately is that relations among the Big Three—Russia, Britain and America—may be but to the acid test by these political difficulties in the Orient and in Europe. That's of far greater importance to the peace of the world than is a civil war, or half a dozen of them. We can't repeat too often that international peace depends on unity of the Big Three.

This trio doesn't always see eye to eye in the matter of handling the political problems. That's natural and nothing to worry about unduly—so long as the disagreements are kept well in hand. However, let's recognize at once that some of the cruises both in Europe and in the Orient are potentially explosive.

We have an example in Russia's sphere of influence in the Balkans. Last Saturday, U. S. Secretary of State Byrnes notified the Bulgarian government that the United States considered it didn't fully represent the people of Bulgaria. Yesterday British Foreign Secretary Bevin told the House of Commons that Britain won't recognize the government of Bulgaria, Romania and Hungary at present because they "do not in our view represent the majority of the people, and the impression we get from recent developments is that one kind of totalitarianism is being replaced by another."

Bevin didn't mention communism specifically, but the implication was there.

That is only one phase of the situation in which the whole eastern hemisphere is swinging "left." This poses two blunt questions: can we expect Russia not to look with approval at this swing? By the same token, can we expect Britain and America always to look with approval at extreme tendencies?

I think the answer to both these questions is in the negative. This being so, we arrive at a conclusion which has been stated in a previous column—that the next year or so, while these political adjustments are under way, represents the most delicate time in the relations of the Big Three. Peace depends upon the amount of give and take among the Big Three—who no longer have the exigencies of the battle field to bind them together.

Have eggs at room temperature before beating them.

FARMER - SAILOR ONE OF STAUNCH WSCS BACKERS

Plan To Drop Coins in Jar In Country Store Started By John Bonner

One of the staunch supporters of the Spring Grove Methodist Church's WSCS has been thousands of miles away on a warship fighting Japs and dodging suicide planes, but the good women of the Parrott Station community are backing up John Bonner, RM 3-c on the home front.

John, a farmer boy turned sailor to help his country in time of war, used to loaf a bit at Mr. and Mrs. George F. Erich's store at Parrott's Station when home on those occasional furloughs. He saw the little glass jar on the counter in which sales tax stamps were dropped by the customers for the WSCS. Not having any tax stamps, John dropped in some coins, and told Mrs. Erich he hoped they would help. That started something new. Not that a lot of coins overflowed the jar, but it did bring in some extra cash for the church society of which Mrs. Willard Creamer is currently the president.

John is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gus Bonner who live on the Ed Bush farm. He went to school and made friends as a kid in the New Holland and South Charleston communities.

After he put those first coins in the jar more than a year ago, he went back to sea. He has written home that he was on the Destroyer Purdy when it was hit by a Jap suicide plane. While it was undergoing repairs, he got to come back as far as California, but did not get to come home. So, he wrote a letter to Mr. and Mrs. Erich, which he signed "Your good friend and admirer, Johnnie." In his letter he said he hoped the coins were still being dropped in the little jar and wrote a three stanza poem about "God's Silent Partner"—the little jar.

Mrs. Erich, who has lived at Parrott's Station and with her husband run the little store for 40 years, read both at the last meeting of the WSCS in responding to the roll call as is customary by reading something or telling of some incident of general interest. The WSCS members were happy and appreciative and expressed hope that others could get the same inspiration from them. So, here they are, first the letter and then the poem:

"First of all, this missive finds me very well and happy as could be expected under the conditions. I have been here for a week now but it seems like months already. The flight back to duty was really wonderful and uneventful as far as any danger is concerned. I don't think that Mr. Erich has anything to worry about as far as airplanes are concerned. I remember him saying that it didn't seem quite safe enough in its present status but I assure him that it is now as safe as the automobile so here is hoping that if he ever gets the opportunity to ride in a plane that he does take advantage of that opportunity.

"I suppose that you both have everything under control in the big city of 'Parrott Station,' Ohio, U.S.A.—I don't guess that Mr. Erich has been proclaimed official mayor of the little village, but I am positive that if it were to have a mayor (the idea would be ludicrous)—that George F. Erich would be getting it, if seniority has anything to do with it.

"We have been enjoying a comfortable climate since I have returned and I do think that it is rather unusual for this part of the country. I have no griping to do, however, as these warm days and cold nights are O.K. with me. The country is a rainbow of color with its many varieties of 'flora and fauna' and I know that you would think it a very lovely sight. We have little time for flowers and the like but it is nice to have them to look upon.

"I hope that the 'kids' have been dropping into pay you visits every now and then—just as we did when I was enjoying my leave at home—and oh by the way, I also hope that they have not been a bit slacking as far as the contributions are concerned. The little jar on the counter, I mean. I can think of no organization that would be more deserving of those contributions no matter how small they might be. After all, it is not only the satisfaction that one gets through contributing but it is also a great aid when it comes to keeping up the church. So—don't be hesitant to ask the brothers of mine whether or not they have forgotten that little practice that we established when I was home and often visited the store.

"It is wonderful to know that my family is living in a community that houses as many fine families as does that vicinity surrounding Jeffersonville and Washington Court House. Of course, I have only become acquainted with a few of the many but those acquaintances that I have made already have been, to me, what I consider, an asset. I hope now that it will not be too long before the war is over and I and the rest of the fellows will be able to return to those places which we call the 'home'—whether it be in Brooklyn, New York or Moose River, Montana, that same feeling is prevalent—a close unity between the servicemen and home.

"I have only time to write a few lines at present, but I thought that I would just let you know that I have not forgotten you—and never will, for that matter."

"GOD'S SILENT LABORER"

I'm just a glass jar on the counter, But I'm full of pride and joy, When you stuff me full of tax stamps, Coins, or anything, old boy.

Please don't think that I am useless, Cause I'm worthy of your praise I'm accomplishing my purpose, Money for the church, I raise.

which was used against troops with a deadly and horrible effect.

After the pilot had used his two minutes of fuel, he pulled a lever and was catapulted out to float to safety by parachute. Simultaneously, the tail of the plane dropped off, releasing another parachute which brought the craft gently to earth where the Germans could salvage the jet units. Chains of stations for these jet craft were stationed all along the bombers' routes.

Another German weapon was the spider bomb—a winged missile fired from planes and electrically guided to targets by a thread of wire attached to the bomb and the parent craft. Some spider bombs were operated as much as 15 miles from the parent plane, allowing the pilot to remain at a safe distance while attacking bomber formations.

For submarine warfare, the Germans developed a super-speed U-boat powered by ingolene, the powerful propellant used in V2 rocket bombs. The submarines attained high underwater speed. They perfected a "splash bullet"

The Peace Job

The way in which people of this nation have won the Japanese war, starting unprepared and working like Trojans until they mastered their job and beat down a strong and prepared enemy, will be a history lesson forever. They showed what Americans can do when concentrated on a common purpose.

Now people are asking whether we can win the peace. We certainly can, if we concentrate on the job and stick to it half as well as we did with the fighting job.

But just as it took new methods and weapons to win the war, perhaps new procedures are necessary for this present phase. The world is not the same now, and many of its problems are different. Maybe people themselves have changed in important ways. Maybe our economy needs overhauling. Maybe our domestic thinking is behind the times. Maybe there should be new procedures and aims of a dozen or a hundred kinds that we never tackled before.

Sometimes a war, anyway, generally stirs up a nation and gives it, after the first shock, a new lease of life and a new outlook, but the destructiveness of such a calamity more than offsets most of the progressive after-effects.

Gen. Ike Gives It Straight

A few weeks ago the news out of the American occupation zone in Germany was of stumbling and cross purposes which added up to bad local government in numerous cities. It is significant, though not surprising, that few such stories have been heard since General Eisenhower took up his new duties.

General Ike seems to have approached the job with his usual vigor and straight thinking. This is evident in his instructions to residents of the American zone which clarified the beginning of German life under the provisions of the Potsdam Conference.

He made no bones of the fact that the Germans will be cold and hungry this winter. And he made it clear that, while life would be pretty grim, any whining by the defeated enemy would be not only fruitless, but time-wasting. In short, General Ike "laid it on the line."

So now the Germans under American control know what is in store and what they can do about it. If they behave decently they won't be molested. But neither will they be helped. Their fate is of their own devising, and their salvation is in their own hands.

So they are now to get to work and harvest their crops, put their wrecked houses in livable condition, cut the winter firewood for their coalless furnaces. All of which should keep them so busy as to leave little time for self-pity—which will be a considerable help to everybody, including the Germans.

came in their time. But now it has given way to a more sober mood.

What thoughtful people want to know is, "Can such victories last? Are there other envious nations, as there are envious men? And will not envy break out again, with as much ferocity as ever, when the envious national groups, statesmen and militarists, think they can win?"

The average man, in every civilized land, is a pretty decent individual, living at peace with his neighbors and in general cooperating with them for mutual benefit. But the average nation as a whole is probably less civilized than its component parts, when mass emotions arise.

That is, unless it has enlightened leaders strong enough to overcome its less civilized groups. This is where personality becomes most valuable. An honest and enlightened man with power to shape other men in his own image is the noblest work of God.

Bending the Law

Dissenting from the opinion rendered by the U. S. Supreme Court in the Associated Press case, Justice Roberts said: "From now on, AP is to operate under the tutelage of the court." The Saturday Evening Post points out that the decision is the logical consequence of the past decade of bending the law to fit theories, and concludes:

"One can only hope at this stage that the damage to the American people and the system they have created will not be irreparable before legislation or the passage of time intervenes to spare them the full penalties of the doctrine that the law exists, not to protect the rights of men, but to implement the social theories of governments."

Diagnosing and Treating Injuries to Wrist Bones

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

PERSONS who do a great deal of manual labor are especially exposed to injuries of the wrist unless reasonable care is taken. And this is due to the fact that the wrist is made up of a number of bones.

These injuries may consist of dislocation, or fracture or breaking of the bone, and arise as a result of accidents, such as falls on the hand. Sprains of the wrist are also common, but, according to Doctor John D. Sherrill of Birmingham, Alabama, no diagnosis of wrist sprain should be made until an X-ray examination has been made to make sure that a break of the bones is not present.

Physician's Diagnosis
The physician, after carefully examining the wrist, will decide just what X-ray pictures should be taken and in what position the hand should be held so that the picture will be most likely to reveal the true damage, if any is present. It is a good idea also to have X-ray plates made of both wrists so that one may be compared with the other, to determine if anything is wrong.

In treating injuries of the wrist, an effort must be made to bring the wrist back to its normal function. That means, first, to produce freedom from pain when movements of the wrist occur; second, to maintain the carrying and grasping power of the hand.

CHAPTER TWENTY-EIGHT

Later, Theron and Doris found Chief of Detectives Plant questioning Mamie as to every word Eleanor had uttered before setting out. Doris broke in with, "I think we ought to tell you, officer, that she was unlike herself last week after Gran died."

"You think she's taken her life?" asked Plant. "She hasn't; she was too brave for that."

Plant went on with his questioning until Theron suggested impatiently, "Don't you think we ought to go, Chief?"

But Plant continued going over the ground, quizzing Mamie until he finally looked at his watch, and said, "I'm ready to go now."

The two men went out and sat in the chief's car talking for a time. Finally they drove, not up, but down the mountain road.

Doris phoned Major Tyrell. His wife answered that he had had a call about Eleanor, and had gone out an hour ago. He would take part in the search.

Sukey, in long dressing gown and padded slippers, joined Doris. She couldn't sleep, she whispered; she had seen a man or a bear going through the orchard, crawling on all fours, then getting up and walking straight into the shadows!

"Dreaming, baby," Doris soothed her. Mamie was reading her Bible and praying in the kitchen.

The two sisters stood at the porch railing, arms around each other. Presently, Sukey said, just above a whisper: "Something moved there—over there," she pointed to the upland where the trees thickened.

"Looked like an Indian!" Doris said it too and whirled. "Let's go inside—quick!"

The hours seemed endless until Theron called. His voice had a forced calm. "Get some rest, dear. They're doing all they can, but the real search will start tomorrow."

"Sleep," Doris wailed, "you ask me to sleep when it's my sister I'm—I'm afraid! We've seen things—Sukey and I saw something—moving."

"You're surrounded by guards—perfectly safe! Please do as you're asked," Her husband hung up.

The local telephone exchange had never been so busy. Through all the county the news flew. A man would be called from bed by the ringing phone: "Eph," he'd mutter, "I'm in a fix! I've seen things—Sukey and I saw something—moving."

"You mean we're gonna wipe 'em out?—Good!" "Yep, meet me at the bridge—call Baynes 'n Colby."

A rap at the knocker would bring—another household to the door. "Step outside, Jim," his neighbor would say. Then in the darkness he would blurt: "Short wavin', phony planes, skullduggery, ever since those Joneses settled on November Road. And now—maybe murder or worse. One of our finest girls! We'll nail those Nazis tonight!"

"You bet!" Jim, his eyes steely beneath his shock of hair, clenched his gnarled fists.

"Buddy," said Dr. Blake, the dentist, to a boy he met on the street, "aren't you Bob Seymore's kid? Wasn't your father one of the 'Fightin' Devils' in the last war?"

The boy stiffened with pride. "Yes, mister, that was him."

"If I told you that the Nazis were just a few miles away, what would you do?"

"Do?" Bob Seymore's liquid eyes gleamed. "I'd do plenty! I'm Pop's boy!"

The dentist smiled grimly. "You're whet we want. Come along, son."

It was after two when Ted Keating wakened his pretty wife, Beulah, and told her of his errand. He was coming from the gun closet, tiptoeing so that he would not rouse the children, when he saw the small figure of his wife coming down the stairs. She wore a dark handkerchief over her shining hair, had on slacks and an old sweater, and was stuffing bandages into a bag. She announced, "I'm going with you, Ted."

"Hardly!" he answered. "No one's in the house, the kids might wake!"

"I can do something. I've taken first aid."

Ted grinned. "Sorry, dear. It's men's work; won't be any women along."

She tossed her pretty head. "Don't you fool yourself, Ted Keating, there will too!" She slung her khaki first aid kit over her shoulder.

They drove for a few miles, then left their car in the ditch behind a long row of others, and joined a straggling line climbing the twisting road. A group of tough, stringy, weatherbeaten men who looked like farmers, passed them, carrying double-barreled twelve gauges; they caught up with two or three figures who bore old army rifles.

Beulah dropped behind Ted for a moment. Then she ran up and caught his arm excitedly. "Ted, did you hear that? What those men were saying? 'Ellie Lawrence is missing!'"

Ted gave a grunt and did not slow his pace. Beulah went on swiftly. "Her grandmother was killed last week. Ellie lives practically alone. . . . Right near those bushes. So they think—"

"I know," said Ted tersely. "They told me on the phone."

This was not a mob. It was an aroused group of vigilantes, outraged by treason and treachery in their midst. The stern, intent faces, the marching feet of men, women and boys, created a rhythm of union, and Beulah lost herself in a feeling of oneness with them all.

At a certain point in the road they were deployed through the fields and woods to surround the Jones house, keeping at a distance until the first rim of the sun showed. Then they were all to move in at one time. The password was "Bataan!"

Beulah and Ted moved through a gray unreal world, found a fence corner, where they waited. The ground was too soggy to sit down; the mosquitoes, voracious and vicious. They could see pine trees now that were not visible a moment before, and a mist, thicker in some places than others. The silvery light became paler. Then rosy shafts tipped November's cliffs; the dew-laden grass glittered with rainbow colors.

"Now!" murmured Ted. They crept forward as all around them were other tense figures moving in toward the grim mansion whose roof they could now see. Beulah sprang over the stone fence of the grounds with as much agility as Ted.

Carlotta had risen early to work on some correspondence. Now she could hear the servants padding down the stairs. Waiting for her early cup of coffee, ordered for 5 a. m., she fingered the scrap of scribbled paper which "Doc" had fished from Bill Steuben's desk last night. One more reading of the magic phrases to help her through the heavy tasks of the day! She read:

"Because you said you love me, I seem standing in sunlight. . . . What color are your eyes? A search through gems and flowers provides no similes for that heart-stealing blue! Nor are there words to describe your courage. Melancholy moods when I think of your danger, dreams of a happy reunion—these are the emotions that fill me. It is a bond that we work in the same cause."

He had broken off there. Carlotta pressed the paper to her lips. This was what Bill felt inwardly toward her! The beauty of it was that he had never expected her to see these self-revealing lines: "Doc" in his snooping, had found them under a pile of drawers. Smiling, she slipped the letter into her bosom.

Radar To Make Postwar Travel Safer

By FRANK CAREY

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—(P)—

Radar, the magic eye that knows no night, will make sea and air travel in the postwar world virtually foolproof despite darkness or weather. However, its application to land transport in the immediate future is less clear.

That is the outlook advanced today by American military experts and scientists as they disclosed most of the secrets of the device that has proved the outstanding offensive and defensive weapon of the war.

Radar—the coined name for "radio detection and ranging"—is a technique for detecting objects by means of radio-wave echoes. Its principle is much the same as that which permits a person to detect the presence of an unseen cliff by uttering a shout and listening for the sound echo. The difference is that the sound echo is picked up by the ear, whereas the radio echo is picked up by a sensitive radio receiver.

The received echoes can be presented visually on a radar "scope" in such a manner that an operator can tell immediately the range, bearing and altitude of the unseen object that has caused the reflection.

Based on reports of the army and navy and the office of scientific research and development in a lengthy presentation outlining the amazing performance of radar at war, this picture can be drawn for immediate application to peacetime use:

For shipping and passenger liners, collisions with other craft or with icebergs in darkness, fog or storm will be impossible, because radar "sees" all to the limit of the horizon.

Ships can be brought safely into narrow harbors, avoiding navigational hazards, detecting landmarks, light houses, buoys, rocks, and other vessels even though visibility be at zero.

In the air, pilots of commercial liners will be able to navigate almost entirely by radar. Through their radar scopes they will be able to get a faithful reproduction of the terrain below and for several hundred miles all around them, even though there is complete overcast.

Shorelines, cities, mountains, lakes and rivers will be emphasized, with water appearing black because it does not reflect radar waves, and landmarks showing up in sharp white light representations.

In transoceanic hops, navigators will be aided in fixing their positions by a system of giant land-based electronic navigation stations.

Radar "altimeters" will give pilots their absolute altitude above the ground at all times, while small radar beacons or "rangers," flashing a coded reply to the challenge of an airplane's radar, will offer a check on the radar map picture as planes fly over tricky territory. Radar also will be a weather aid, because it sometimes gets a reflection pattern from extremely dense thunderheads.

But the American experts on radar painted a less rosy picture of the possibilities of applying radar to aid land transport, at least right away.

In the terms in which it exists now, radar is not a very useful attachment to an automobile or a railroad locomotive, they reported.

The reason for this is that radar, rather than not seeing enough, sees too much. Attached to an automobile as a means of detecting objects in a fog, it would be bewildered by what the experts call "ground clutter"—a reflection from the road itself. Reflections from other automobiles, trees by the roadside, hydrants and objects at great distances would becloud the picture so much that the operator might not be able to interpret it.

Great Britain, which pioneered the operational use of radar—it saved her life in the "blitz"—also reported on her war uses of the technique. While the British report gave no specific forecasts of the peacetime use of the development, it said radar "will surely prove as valuable in peace as it has been revolutionary in war."

The British say they even have a set "so sensitive that a single infantryman wriggling along the ground many yard away, or even pebble kicked towards the equipment, will give a response."

The earliest form of bread was prepared from acorns and beech-nuts.

Washington at a Glance

By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON — Behind the production of those air-bomb volcanoes known as atomic bombs is one of the strangest manhunt in history.

It was the search for nearly a quarter of a million persons to work in remote areas on a project so secret that thousands of them finished their tasks without ever knowing what they were doing.

In a couple of years two "cities" of approximately 50,000 workers each sprang up where only a desert whistle stop and a small town of 4,000 souls bloomed before. Each of these "cities" saw another 50,000 workers, many with their families, come and go.

Both were component parts of what was secretly named and now well known as "the Manhattan project." Both produced essential parts of the atomic bomb.

One is near Clinton, Tenn., a stone's throw from famous Norris dam on the Clinch river. There, since the summer of 1943, the payrolls have ed 171,000 workers. There is some duplication in this figure, since none of the dozen employing contractors made any effort to check off those who had worked previously for others.

Peak employment at Clinton was around 55,000. The workers live in Oak Ridge, a brand new city of 75,000 persons — fifth largest in the state.

The other mushroom city popped up near the little town of Hanford, Wash., on the sandblown sagebrush flats above the Columbia river, with the Saddle Mountains and the Yakima Ridge on its horizons.

Here, 81,000 workers have dumped their bedrolls or parked their trailers and gone to square-mile "plant" of the Hanford somewhere in the 25-foot Engineer Co. (really our old Delaware neighbors, the DuPonts) or for the Olympic Commissary Co., which feeds and furnishes the crews.

The manhunt that produced Clinton was relatively simple. It was in a surplus labor pool that it needs occasionally became acute and sent the manhunt off in full cry. The manhunt that produced Hanford was a labor of Hercules.

The agency which was master of hounds at both these hunts was Paul V. McNutt's War Manpower Commission. In two years WMC turned up 33,000 candidates for jobs at Clinton, of whom 13,000 were hired, and 137,700 for Hanford, of whom 58,000 were hired.

WMC did all this without ever knowing just what it was hiring men for.

All they knew was that President Roosevelt, his imagination fired with the possibilities in something that just might be the weapon of tomorrow, had written a letter to Maj. Gen. Leslie R. Groves, over-all director of the project. That letter was Gen. Groves' carte blanche to raid the nation's tight labor market if necessary. Whenever WMC's spirits lagged in that apparently thankless task, the General waved the Roosevelt letter. The hunt was on again.

The Joy Circle Holds Meeting Monday Evening

The Joy Circle of the First Baptist Church held their regular meeting Monday evening at the home of Mrs. Helen Campbell on Oak Street.

Mrs. Campbell, president of the class, was in charge of the business meeting and devotional period.

During the business meeting plans were started for the membership tea to be held in the fall. An interesting review of the study book, entitled "West of the Date Line" was given by Miss Claribel Robinson.

During the social hour delicious refreshments were served by the hostess assisted by Mrs. Kaye Merrill.

Large Number Attend Reunion At Cherry Hill

The fiftieth annual Parrett brothers of the Parrett family gathering when more than sixty members of the family gathered together at the Cherry Hill School.

A large assortment of delicious food was placed on a long table in the basement of the school house and served cafeteria style.

During the business meeting the secretary read several incidents that had occurred during the history of the Parrett reunions.

Officers elected for the coming year were: President, George Smalley; vice president, Corwin Cory; and secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Corwin Cory.

Following the business meeting the remainder of the afternoon was spent in informal visiting.

FIRM U. S. CONTROL OF ISLANDS URGED

Congressional Backing for Policy Develops

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21—(AP)—Strong congressional backing lined up today behind a house naval committee's recommendation for firmer United States control of Pacific bases than through "gentlemen's agreements."

This country, the committee said, should have at least a working agreement for use of bases on islands held by our own Allies as well as by Japan.

The committee urged outright control by the United States of Japanese-mandated and outlying Japanese-owned islands and retention of "very definite rights" to American bases built on islands controlled by our allies. It withheld until later recommendations as to Formosa, Ponape, Jaluit and Yap, still held by Japan.
